Activity

Share

How'd It Go?

You've finished your project. You should feel great about this accomplishment but before you walk away and move on to more wonderful projects, it's very important to take some time to think about how this project went, what you learned, and any lessons you can apply to future projects.

For this activity you will answer ==six of the reflection prompts below==. However, you don't have to write your answers! Here's another chance to get creative as you did with the very first activity, Find My Passions. You can answer the prompts in writing, if you choose, but you can also answer them with emojis (with a brief explanation), a slide show, your own drawings, images from the web, short videos, anything you want to express your personal reflection. As always we encourage you to get creative. Any sort of multimedia project is welcome!

Upload your final multimedia project of your reflection to your Launchpad Profile.

Share

You must answer these first three questions.

1. What are you most proud of in this project?

In this project, I'm most proud of how far I've come. Looking back at this journey, I'm happy I learned the basics of skateboarding. I thought I might get further during this short time period, but I'm actually very proud of where I ended up.

2. Ask at least one other person what they think you accomplished by doing this project. What are they proud of or impressed by in your project?

My mom responded to this question for me. She was impressed by my passion throughout this project, and that I stuck with it and really tried. She's also happy I didn't break any bones.

3. What is one thing you learned about yourself by doing this project?

Something I learned about myself was that when I really put my mind to something I can achieve it. I also learned that when I give things chances it can be really beneficial to me. This is because when I actually pursued skateboarding and gave it a chance, I was really happy with the outcome.

Choose any THREE of the questions below.

1. What surprised you during this project? Was something easier/harder than you thought? Did you enjoy something more/less than you thought?

I didn't think I would like skateboarding as much as I did. Even though I'm just a beginner and I'm not super good at it yet, I really want to continue and get better. Honestly, I forgot to film for my final pitch often because I was just going outside to skateboard and forgot it was for a project. Skateboarding became more than just schoolwork to me.

2. How successful were you in achieving your final goal?

I'd say I was successful. Although I didn't learn any tricks, I think that might have been a bit of a stretch for a goal in the first place. I think success is more about how you feel about what you did rather than if you achieved your final goal fully or not, and I feel really good about how I did. :)

3. What was the most enjoyable part of the project?

The most enjoyable part of this project was skateboarding itself. I really fell in love with it. I never really got frustrated while skating, so that aspect made it truly enjoyable.